CHAPTER TWO

Written Number Chapter Opening with Uppercase Line

*This is called a headnote • An optional feature •
They can be used to summarize what's in a chapter
• Or to set the scene • Or to highlight key points*

UPPERCASE WORDS ON the opening line can look quite digni-fied and some people prefer them to dropcaps. Another feature on this page is the placement of the folio (that's the fancy name for "page number") as it appears in the bottom-center of the page, a traditional placement for it on a new chapter.

Now follows a bunch of nonsense Latin filler text. Aliquaspiet volupti omniminit volores sit harcim lam exceari bereperio. Ut officia ndicidu cipsandis re dolestoratur auteceptatur molor-rum dolorae con eosam.

Henis eaquis maxim quas corio expellut pa et mo conem int volore, qui nis dio omnihic ipsapedit volo maximus is rem adist lis sed tem lia conem explia volupta tiossit lique derrovi digeni ipsaped qui omnimin et ento exerupta quam rem.